Chairperson’s Report

STTARS continues to work in the forefront of issues confronting refugees and asylum seekers. The last 12 months has involved considerable changes in Federal Government policies concerning asylum seekers.

In its deliberations, the Board has resolved that, in this challenging policy context, STTARS services are based on an understanding of, and concern for, client outcomes. Aside from the ongoing commitment to providing services to people in South Australia, this now includes the provision of torture/trauma counselling services to asylum seekers held in the Regional Processing Centres on Nauru and Manus Island.

Late last year, DIAC flagged the need for torture/trauma counselling services to be provided to asylum seekers transferred to Nauru and Manus Island.

The Directors of the Forum of Australian Services for Survivors of Torture and Trauma (FASSTT) agreed that it was important that FASSTT offer counselling services to people on Nauru and so delegated a sub-committee to set up an organisation specifically to provide torture trauma services in overseas locations.

The sub-committee consisted of Jorge Aroche (Director of STARTTS in NSW), Michael Jones (Director of ASeTTS in WA) and the Director of STTARS, Bernadette McGrath.

The new organisation, Overseas Services for Survivors of Torture and Trauma (OSSTT), was formed to ensure that asylum seekers on Nauru and Manus Island would have access to the same high quality trauma counselling services that are available to asylum seekers in Australia. However, it was not possible for the new organisation to be operational in the timeframe that was required by DIAC.

Therefore the STTARS Board was asked to consider taking responsibility for the delivery of overseas services in the interim. The STTARS Board endorsed this request and Bernadette McGrath introduced the delivery of services earlier this year- initially in Nauru, and later on Manus Island. In doing this, the STTARS Board made a clear commitment to review STTARS’ involvement and the current contract ends at the end of January 2014.

This situation has required both the Board and Senior staff to take careful account of all the policy issues related to our organisation’s involvement in such a complex and potentially tense work environment for our staff. In response to this, the Board formalised additional governance arrangements by introducing a system of subcommittees to manage some of the complexities. This has worked well, and some Board members (David Egege, Marilyn Lennon and Di Gursansky and Michael Colmagro) have put in considerable hours to address the policy, insurance, contractual, legal and financial issues that have arisen.

The Board has also been required to carefully consider how best to manage the operation of STTARS while the Director has been focused on the development of the overseas services. In many respects, the additional demands made of the Board have provided a useful catalyst to review how it operates in relation to its strategic and operational responsibilities.

During the year, the Board farewelled Dilip Chirmuley and George Pazman and welcomed Di Gursansky.

Dilip was a long standing member of the Board. As such, he was part of the evolution of STTARS and we thank him for his loyalty and contributions over a long period of time. George’s contributions to the Board were also much appreciated, and we value the breadth of knowledge and experience that Di brings to the Board.
Special thanks are due to David Egege for his leadership of STTARS as Chair when I stood down for four months owing to commitments which meant that I could not fulfil my responsibilities as Chair.

David provided strong and clear direction at a time when the Board was confronted with making some major decisions.

In closing, I wish to acknowledge on behalf of the Board, the continuing high quality work undertaken by the staff of STTARS under Bernadette’s leadership as Director, with strong support from Robyn Smythe, Director of Operations.

Finally, Board members generously give their time and expertise to lead the organisation. I sincerely thank all for their commitment and good will that has enabled us to address the challenges before us over the 2012-2013 period.

Marj Ellis
Chairperson
The year started off quietly enough. In those first few weeks it felt like we had an opportunity to draw breath for the first time since the increase in torture/trauma funding we received in 2011 forced a period of major growth and change. It was an all too brief hiatus.

The publication of the Expert Panel recommendations in August 2012 signalled a dramatic shift in government policy towards asylum seekers and humanitarian entrants and the start of another period of change and growth for STTARS. STTARS has been engaged since early 2013 in providing torture and trauma services to asylum seekers being held on Nauru and we are about to start providing services to those held on Manus Island.

Even though this has been a steep learning curve for us, I am very proud of the quality of the services we have been providing overseas and would like to thank everyone – the staff who took up the challenge of working overseas, the staff who provided support from home base in Adelaide, and the members of the Board who put in many hours over and above the call of duty – for their hard work in ensuring the success of this project.

In addition, the Asylum Seeker team here in Adelaide has been extremely busy, not only working with clients in Port Augusta, Inverbrackie and in Community Detention, but also with the large numbers of asylum seekers living in the community on BVEs with no work rights and minimal access to supports.

Working with asylum seekers, whether within Australia or in overseas locations, demands a very different approach to the one staff from Australian torture and trauma services are familiar with. Normally our services are provided to people who have been granted permanent residency in Australia with counselling taking place in the context of relative safety. For people who have no permanent status and particularly for those on Nauru or Manus Island, we have to work with the profound anxiety that is generated by living with long term uncertainty as well as the impacts of past torture and trauma experiences. This is hard on counselling staff who struggle with their own sense of helplessness.

With all the work STTARS has undertaken with asylum seekers both here and overseas, it would be easy to overlook the other equally important and innovative work STTARS has been doing over the past year. The STTARS Community Development Program closed briefly during 2012-13. Following a review of our service model we appointed a new CD Coordinator who has brought fabulous energy and lots of new ideas to the program. We have also instituted a new model for service delivery in the Riverland and Limestone Coast regions, training and supporting local staff to provide counselling to torture survivors.

In October 2012 STTARS brought John Arden, an international authority on neurobiology and trauma, to Adelaide. A three day training seminar provided a wonderful professional development opportunity for all of STTARS direct service delivery staff. Places were also offered to mental health professionals from other services around the state, thereby increasing knowledge and expertise more broadly. STTARS are hoping to make this type of training an annual event.

The Complementary Therapies program is experiencing a “renaissance” with a new focus on the importance of physical health and nutrition and the role it plays in reducing the symptoms of trauma. This program works alongside the other programs complementing the counselling and social supports. The Refugee Mental Health Clinic has continued to be incredibly busy with many new referrals. We now host four consultants (Dr Daya Somasundaram, Shona Russell, Dr John Raftery and Tanja Stojadinovic), employ two very busy caseworkers, and run clinics two evenings and two afternoons per week. Tanja introduced a new focus for the clinic, providing counselling specifically to women who are survivors of rape in the context of war.

The Adult Counselling and Child and Youth teams provided services to a record number of clients this year. The staff in these teams have really stretched themselves, actively engaging in their own professional development and seeking new approaches to working with our clients. In addition to the essential work of 1–1 counselling and casework, they have continued to surprise and delight with imaginative and creative activities in groups, in schools and on camps.

The Admin team, together with Finance, Human Resources and IT, provide the “scaffolding” that supports the work of STTARS direct services. As we have grown, so the demands on administration have increased and we have really appreciated their flexibility and responsiveness to the needs of the agency. This past year has seen a complete reorganisation of our client files and archiving system, the bedding down of the new database and setting up an IT system that connects our two service sites in the CBD and Bowden (easier said than done as it turned out!).

A staff committee has continued the process of reviewing the STTARS Enterprise Bargaining Agreement and we look forward to progressing this to Board level in the 2013-14 financial year.

As ever, many thanks go to all our interpreters. The care they bring to their work is greatly valued by staff and clients alike. In recognition of how important interpreters are to the work we do, we have initiated quarterly Interpreter Training and Support sessions, enabling interpreters to develop their professional skills as well as providing them with an opportunity to debrief. These sessions have been very well attended.

Thanks to our Community Reference Group and the Dream Team (Child and Youth Reference Group) who provide us with invaluable feedback on our work and suggestions for improving services.

STTARS said goodbye to a number of staff over the past year. I sincerely thank them all for the very valuable contribution they made to STTARS during their time with us and wish them all well in their future endeavours. I would also like to thank the staff who willingly took on extra responsibilities and stepped up into acting leadership positions during this transition period.

I would like to especially thank Robyn Smythe (Service Development Manager), Tanja Stojadinovic (Client Services Manager until April 2013) and Steve Thompson (Acting Client Services Manager April 2013 – August 2013). STTARS has benefited enormously from their expertise, commitment and sheer hard work. Robyn is currently holding the temporary position of Director of Operations, allowing me to focus on the overall strategic development of STTARS and provide direct line management to the overseas services.

My thanks also to the STTARS Board of Management. This period of rapid growth and development into new areas of service has involved a great deal of additional work. Members of the Board have volunteered many hours of their own time to provide oversight and guidance through this challenging period.
